-----Save the Date-----

-----New CFOOTMAD Dance Series!-----
Hands Across Contra features inclusive gender-neutral contra dancing every 4th Saturday. Calls are made using the terms “larks” and “ravens” rather than the traditional “gents” and “ladies”, and we encourage all dancers to choose whichever role or roles they prefer. Hands across is also a great place to experiment if you’d like to learn a new role! Different language, but preserving the traditions that make contra such a fun and engaging dance form, such as, fantastic live music, a welcoming community, and vibrant dancing to thrill experienced dancers and 1st timers alike. There’s a beginner’s lesson and each dance is taught by the caller. Everyone is welcome, no partner or experience needed! Pizza, just across the street at Anthony’s – what’s better than pizza and contra dancing?

-----Misc-----
We encourage the use of reusable water bottles
We’re fragrance free – come as you are; clean and au naturel!
Try the Zesty dance – no secret handshake required!

-----Grant Writing Anyone?-----
We’re looking for an apprentice who can help with the CFOOTMAD SCFD grant. Contact Caroline Fuller, grantwriter@cfootmad.org.

Let’s Talk… (not so) “secrets” of the contra dance caller

A peek into the mysterious world of the caller – random factoids you don’t really need to know, but contrary to popular opinion, a little knowledge is really not all that dangerous. Personally, I thought I knew everything – until I tried calling.

Why do we back up after the walkthrough? Typically, dancers take hands four starting with the top couple. After one walkthrough, the top couple gets ejected. It’s by convention that dances start with the top couple in, so we have everyone back up to their original hands four. You’ll notice that if a dance is walked through twice, there’s no backing up – the top couple is automatically back in after the second walkthrough. The exception are double progression dances – each time through a double progression, you progress through two sets of neighbors, which means no one is ever out, or at least not for very long. By the way, since double progression dances move through the set twice as fast, you’ll notice that callers avoid them when the lines are short – it gets repetitious, traversing the set more than once, and if the dance has complex end effects, the dancers can reach the end of the set before they’ve got the dance down – can you say “train wreck”?

How many dances do we do in an evening? You don’t know? Don’t feel badly – you’re not alone. Typically, there are ten dances in an evening, six before the break, four after. Each dance takes roughly 8-10 minutes, with something like five minutes for the dancers to line up, take hands four, and walk through the dance. Each “cycle” through the dance takes about 30 seconds, in which time, 64 (or so) beats of music have gone by and the band has played through the tune one time.

Each dance is typically divided into four parts – referred to as “A1”, “A2”, “B1”, “B2”. Each part of the dance takes 16 beats of music to execute. The music, however, is divided into two parts – A and B. If you listen closely, you’ll hear the A part of the music repeat twice, then the B part repeat twice. That’s considered “once” through the tune (and dance). By the way, bands generally play one, two, or three tunes during each dance – if they play more than one tune, the transition in tunes occurs at the beginning of a dance cycle, aka, the top of the A1.

Before we part, a word about shadows - everyone on the same side of the set as your partner that’s dancing the opposite role is a potential shadow (other than your partner). Even though you have many shadows, we typically only interact with one or two, otherwise there wouldn’t be enough time for your partner or your neighbor. The takeaway? Your shadow(s) are always on the same side of the set as your partner. Ideas for future topics? I’m all ears - Paul Somlo

CFOOTMAD NEWSLETTER DEADLINE

Friday, June 7 is the deadline for the July/Aug 2019 newsletter. Submit materials to newsletter@cfootmad.org.

CFOOTMAD is a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization. Funds to support CFOOTMAD come from admission fees, memberships, SCFD funding, and from generous individuals who give above and beyond their membership dues. Consider making a CFOOTMAD donation to sponsor a dance in celebration of your birthday, anniversary, or any other reason that strikes your fancy. Thank you to all CFOOTMAD members and a special thanks to those who have made additional donations. Thanks also to the many members of the CFOOTMAD dance community who donate their time and talent in ways large and small – your CFOOTMAD board: Nancy Reindl, Sam Smith, Christa Torrens, Mark Berte, Steve Thomas
